El causativo: have something done

Cómo decir que otra persona hace algo por ti (me cortaron el pelo, me arreglaron el coche) con 44 ejercicios y soluciones.

Usamos el causativo cuando alguien hace algo por nosotros, normalmente porque le pagamos o se lo pedimos. Mira la diferencia:

I cut my hair.
Me corté el pelo (yo mismo, con mis tijeras).

I had my hair cut.
Me cortaron el pelo (fui a la peluquería).

En español decimos "me corté el pelo" en los dos casos, y por eso a los hispanohablantes se les olvida esta estructura. En inglés, si lo hizo otra persona, hay que usar el causativo.

La forma básica

have / get + objeto + participio

Get significa lo mismo que have y es un poco más informal:

I had my car fixed at the garage. / I got my car fixed at the garage.
Me arreglaron el coche en el taller. Tú no lo arreglaste, lo hizo un mecánico.

El tiempo verbal va en have

El verbo have (o get) se conjuga en el tiempo que necesites, y el participio no cambia nunca:

Amanda is washing her car. Amanda está lavando el coche.
Amanda is having her car washed. A Amanda le están lavando el coche.

Si dices quién lo hace have + persona + infinitivo sin to

I had the barber cut my hair.
Le pedí al barbero que me cortara el pelo.

I had the electrician fix the cables.
Hice que el electricista arreglara los cables.

get + persona + to + infinitivo

I got the cleaner to clean the kitchen.
Conseguí que el limpiador limpiara la cocina.

I got the students to write on the board.
Hice que los alumnos escribieran en la pizarra.
